I've seen other answers but they do not address the problem of having a decimal. I did think of converting the decimal into a String and then using Integer.toHexString() however, I've been getting some weird characters from it. Any help would be great! A: If you're looking for a somewhat "Mathemagical" way to convert a decimal into a Hexadecimal, you can use BigInteger and use binary masking to create a hexidecimal string: BigInteger bi = new BigInteger(dec); String hex = bi.toString(16); System.out.println(hex); That will output something like: 0xFFFFFFFFFEDCBAF A: You have to first convert your decimal number into a binary string, and then convert that binary string into a hexadecimal string. Code: long l = 1L; String binaryString = Long.toBinaryString(l); String hexString = String.format("%0x", Long.parseLong(binaryString, 2));
